

ABSTRACT

A filter device for an exhaust hood including a plurality of adjacent chambers limited by wall-shaped elements and formed in a flat array. A sorbent in the chambers for absorbing sorbents in air flowing transversely through the array. At least one element formed in a convex and/or concave shape in cross-section in the direction of air flow in order to deflect air downstream of the filter device.